Other Information:

- WGS 101 meets the diversity proficiency and many WGS elective courses meet core requirements, including both foundational and proficiency requirements.
- Minors are not required to take WGS 489 (Capstone); however, they are eligible and welcome to take it after completing WGS 101 and three WGS electives.
- WGS 270, 370, and 470 electives are special topics courses that are generally open to all class years. These special topics electives include both Social Science/Natural Science and Humanities designated WGS electives.

- Several WGS electives (including WGS 327, 365, and a few other special topics) are designated as both WGS Social Science/Natural Science and Humanities Electives, and in consultation with the student's academic advisor, and the Chair of the WGS Department, can count for either a SSC/NSC or HUM designation based on the individual student's needs and preferences.
- Because WGS elective courses are interdisciplinary, all WGS elective courses are cross listed with at least one other department or program. This means that WGS minors taking a WGS elective course often receive course credit towards their WGS minor, and towards another minor (or major) simultaneously.
